God’s Law for Our Good

The Bible teaches that God’s commandments are meant to bless and guide us. Psalm 119:1-2 declares, “Blessed are those whose way is blameless, who walk in the law of the Lord!” Why then, would God remove something that was always intended to bring life and blessing?

The prophet Isaiah warns of a time when people will claim good is evil and evil is good (Isaiah 5:20). Are we seeing this today in how some approach God’s commandments?

Consider these questions:

- If the law is love (Matthew 22:37-40), does the standard for loving God and others change?
- If the law teaches eternal principles of justice and righteousness (Deuteronomy 10:12-13), how could the law become irrelevant after the cross?

We know from Scripture that God is consistent in his nature and purposes (Malachi 3:6; Hebrews 13:8). He is eternal and does not change.

God’s word reflects that unchanging nature. God always has and always will bless those who obey his commandments. When we dismiss his commandments, we are not only creating inconsistencies within the scriptures, but we are also depriving ourselves of the fulness of God’s blessings.

God’s law was given for our good, and it reflects his eternal character.

If you want to dive deeper into how the entire Word of God should be an integral part of our faith—and discover how the New Testament supports the continued relevance of God’s commandments—we invite you to visit the 119 Ministries YouTube channel or our website at TestEverything.net.

Shalom, and may Yahweh bless you in walking in the whole Word of God.
